4.46 ~~in those Rural Centres without a centre boundary infill and rounding off will be permitted where there is a physical cohesion of dwellings~~ Housing development will consist of infill for one or two units of a size compatible with its setting in a small gap in an otherwise continuous, built up frontage. 'Rounding off' which would complete or consolidate the built up perimeter will entail the development of no more than one or two dwellings.

4.47 The terms 'sensitive infilling' and 'rounding off' mean that:

- The plots are comparable in size and scale to those of adjoining properties and should be able to accommodate the number of units proposed. The dwellings are of a similar size, scale and massing to those in the area with amenity and circulation space comparable to adjoining properties.
- Sites must also meet all the other criteria against which a housing development would be judged.
