

Milton – a small linear village settlement within the wider setting of the Daugleddau estuary and Carew Castle. Only the northern edge of the village adjoins the National Park boundary, close to the shore of Radford Pill, an arm of the Carew River off the Eastern Cleddau estuary. Unsympathetic modern houses overlook this tranquil backwater of the Carew River, with older and more traditional buildings closer to the old village core at the eastern end of the village

The National Park boundary runs along the hedgebank at the right of the photograph

The northern edge of Milton abutting the National Park are hard in places, through unsympathetic boundary treatments to recent housing. Local hedgebank depletion and replacement with post and wire fences contributes to this effect.

Surrounding Landform	Flat	Rolling/Undulating		Hill & Scarp	Rocky	Convex	Concave
Development Opportunities	Very limited – confined to very small individual residential only, on infill sites within the settlement boundary
Development Constraints	The wider setting of Carew Castle to the north east and the Cleddau estuary and the Listed Building at Milton Bridge constrain development potential to the north east of the village along the northern side of the road.
Other Notes: Loss of hedgebanks and replacement by post and rail fences have formed an open north-western boundary, which needs softening through planting of appropriate vegetation
